

by Mick Forgey

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

February 13, 2019

Share on BlueskyShare on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

Our team of copy editors reads and posts most of what you see on the websites for National Catholic Reporter and Global Sisters Report (the NCR project focusing on women religious). The Copy Desk Daily provides insight on recommended news and opinion articles that have crossed our desks on their way to you.

Leaders of Catholic colleges and universities want to help the church address the clergy sex abuse crisis. The Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities recently held its annual meeting in Washington, D.C., where the crisis was on the minds of attendees. National correspondent Heidi Schlumpf reports that members "have offered their expertise in service to the church." As one source told Schlumpf: "As leaders of these institutions, we have to make the offer and hope they take us up on it."

Read: Catholic higher ed wants to be 'part of the solution' to sex abuse crisis

Joan Chittister continues her examination of the 12 principles of humility of Benedict of Norcia: "Differences are a big thing. They keep a society alive. They are a well of creativity, a signal of new possibilities. They are the resources that nourish a new future for us all. Which is exactly where Benedict's second principle of life comes in."

Read: Our differences will make the difference in our future

Michael Sean Winters gives his forecast for next week's four-day meeting in Rome, where bishop conference presidents from around the world will converge. The prelates will address the church's response to clergy sex abuse. One expectation: "The Holy Father will recognize the need for each episcopal conference to develop its own policies, mindful of the varying legal and cultural situations in each country."

Read: No clear-cut solution to sex abuse, but next week's meeting won't be a failure

From Global Sisters Report: Hundreds of migrants don't survive the trek through U.S. deserts. Felician Sisters support the efforts of a search organization that tries to find those who have perished.

Read: Searching for the lost in the desert

Three books cover (respectively): Thomas Merton's dual identities as priest and author; the search for God in the faith and experiences of others; and four months of introspection and ice formations in British Antarctica. Get three reviews for the price of one click of the link below.

Read: Books explore Merton the writer, Religion 101 and Antarctic ice

Editor's note: Want to keep updated with the latest news from the National Catholic Reporter? Sign up here for news updates by email.

Advertisement