

"That our parishioners were solidly behind us in standing with and unconditionally loving and supporting our trans community, that really spoke to me," said Zerkowski, who hopes that the rescheduled event will fill the church, which has a capacity of about 800 people.

"I don't care about the trolls," Zerkowski said. "I know we are going to have a tremendously safe environment."